

Mariam Mahmud, MD

Mariam is a pediatrician born and raised in Pennsylvania. She is a graduate of Bryn Mawr College and Drexel College of Medicine. Mariam believes strongly in community service, research, interfaith work, and advocacy. Over the last 10+ years, she has worked in a primary care practice in Collegeville. She has been a medical director at an annual screening program for the homeless. Mariam earned her practice a grant from the Albert Einstein Medical Society to improve access to mental health care in the primary care setting. She has served on a quality improvement committee at Einstein Physicians and on the board of directors of the ARC Alliance. Mariam works to improve diversity in education. She is currently a fellow with the Andrew Weil Center for Integrative Medicine.

Mariam hopes to bring her unique skillset and passion for children's health and wellbeing to the Central Bucks School Board of Directors. She will work to improve access to mental health and social emotional learning supports for students and staff. She lives in Chalfont with her husband of over 20 years, 4 kids who attend CB schools, and her dog Copper.
